I believe the most simple, direct solution, that creates the best "Win/Win" solution for all, is to break Microsoft into at a minimum of 2 separate corporations. One cooperation would be the "Windows" operating system and the other would be all other things.

The Windows Operating system would need to be defined as that code that provides the interface between Applications and the underlying hardware.

It is strange that this administration advocates the removal of terrorist and terrorist actions, yet is in the process of single handedly reversing the efforts of many, over a period of time to resolve one of the most outrageous "Computer" terrorist in the last 15 years.
